Storage	Lyophilized Human SHH (C24II), research grade should be stored at -20 °C. The expiration date is indicated on the vial label. Upon reconstitution aliquots should be stored at -20 °C or below. Avoid repeated freeze-thaw cycles.
Reconstitution	It is recommended to reconstitute lyophilized Human SHH (C24II), research grade with deionized sterile-filtered water to a final concentration of 0.1–1.0 mg/mL in a minimal volume of 100 µL. Further dilutions should be prepared with 0.1% bovine serum albumin (BSA) or human serum albumin (HSA) in phosphate-buffered saline.

1.1 Background information

Sonic hedgehog (SHH) is involved in a wide variety of embryonic developmental events, including neurogenesis, limb development, hematopoiesis, and gut formation. Besides their role as morphogens, hedgehog family members have also been shown to act as mitogens, cell survival factors, and axon guidance factors and to influence tissue regeneration within the adult. SHH is synthesized as a precursor, which is autocatalytically cleaved into a 19 kDa N-terminal domain (SHH-N) and a 25 kDa C-terminal domain (SHH-C). SHH-N is responsible for the signaling activity of hedgehog proteins, while SHH-C acts as a cholesterol transferase and covalently attaches a cholesterol molecule to SHH-N. The lipid-modified SHH-N displays enhanced activity. Human SHH (C24II) corresponds to the mature SHH-N domain and carries a Cys to Ile-Ile substitution resulting in a lipophilic moiety and therefore an increased activity.

1.2 Applications

Human SHH (C24II) can be used for a variety of applications including:

- Expansion or differentiation of various cell types, mainly human and mouse embryonic stem cells, but also adult stem cells and mesenchymal cells.

Optimal concentration for a specific application should be determined by a dose-response experiment.
